Comprehension

I. Read the story:

Salim longed for a pet of his own. But he wanted his pet to be different from the others. One evening Salim's uncle brought home a wonderful surprise. "This is Benny", he said. And from under his jacket, a brown rabbit's head appeared--- a very curious rabbit's head, with long, hanging ears and brown hair that felt like velvet. Benny was an unusual – looking rabbit and Salim had never seen one like him before. "But aren't rabbits always white?" asked Salim.

"Not all of them, as you can see", said his uncle as he put Benny down on the floor. The Excited little rabbit sniffed at Salim's and his uncle's shoes. Salim knelt on the floor and tried to catch him. Benny hopped to the side and pulled at Salim's shoe lace. Salim's pet certainly looked different and he was certainly unusual. Salim was sure he had found the perfect pet. Sometimes, Benny was let out into the garden where he sunned himself and played with Salim. At other times, Benny slept in a little box where he was safe. Salim and Benny spent many happy days together.
